AT THE END of their melodramatic flight from Communist Albania, Thanasi and Christaki Nikola are shown as they reached Corfu, Greece, aboard the 10-ton coastal vessel in which they made their escape. They took over the craft after drugging the captain and two army guards, bringing them along as prisoners. The brothers surrendered themselves and their captives and asked political asylum.

High Brass Calls For Action To Hike Interest In Military

WASHINGTON (AP)—A group of generals and admirals called today for a military pay boost and other actions to halt what they termed an alarming deterioration in the career military service.

"Military service has lost much of its attractiveness as a career," said a study committee named by Secretary of Defense Wilson last spring at the direction of President Eisenhower.

"Unless the present trend of career personnel leaving the service can be reversed, most serious consequences to the national defense effort will result."

Asst. Secretary of Defense John Hannah, in making public the report of the five-man committee, said it would receive careful attention from the military services, the Defense Department and the Joint Chiefs of Staff. Hannah added that release of the report implied neither its approval nor acceptance in any respect.

IT IS noted that the report as completed by the group listed the public, the press, Congress and the President's own Bureau of the Budget as being among sources of the difficulties existing.

Among its conclusions and recommendations, the committee of two admirals and three generals said:

1. There is a "positive danger" that budget cutting considerations might be permitted to "transcend" the attainment of combat effectiveness which "must be achieved at whatever cost."

2. The Defense Department should press for a cost-of-living increase in military pay scales as a major means of holding good men in competition with private industry. A committee aide said that the group had in mind an increase of about 8 per cent.

3. Service leaders must accept blame for yielding to popular and "political pressure" in adopting after World War II policies which served to diminish the distinction between ranks and to force officers and enlisted men into a "common social pattern."

4. There should be prompt restoration of fringe benefits and an end to what the report called whitening away of extras which military men have traditionally considered to be part of their income.

Among these benefits the committee listed incentive and hazardous duty pay, sea and foreign duty pay, medical and dental care for dependents, better and cheaper housing and more provision for the education of service children.

U.S. Defense Change To Be Only Gradual

NEW YORK (AP)—Adm. Arthur Radford, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, says the JCS favor a gradual, not radical, change in the national defense setup based on a long-term program.

The admiral, speaking before the American Ordnance Assn., did not mention the "new look" ordered by the Eisenhower administration after installing a new slate of members in the Kremlin.

He said the Soviet system includes a three-pronged method of gaining objectives: politico-economic, military, and psychological propaganda. If one of them is turned back, he said, another is used.

In view of Russia's objectives, he said, talk, "and other planning factors, the new Joint Chiefs of Staff considered it absolutely mandatory that we not make any recommendations for radical changes, especially not on an overnight basis."

"In discussing this with Secretary of Defense Wilson, we agreed that the best defense plans and programs will come about through evolution, if we plan deliberately and with wisdom."

"We further agreed that even though our military plans are based primarily on military factors, we must also take into account a wider range of policy and economic factors and the latest technological developments."

WASHINGTON (AP)—Rep. Bow (R-Ohio) back from a world-girdling inspection tour of U. S. installations, said today the trip modified his opinion of one foreign aid program.

He has decided, he said, the foreign student exchange has many good features. But he said he still thinks the $49½ million used to finance the program probably is too high.

In the past, Bow pointed out, he has voted against appropriations for this program and most other foreign aid. He said he still feels he voted correctly and on his trip found many things to criticize about the expenditures. He said:

"I'm still against British cookie bakers and Spanish dancing teachers coming over here as students."

He said the program probably is too high.

U. N. Approves American Call For Condemnation Of Atrocities

Farm Bureau Backs 90 Pct. Parity Setup

Federation Casts 3-1 Vote Favoring Plan, But Sees End Coming

COLUMBUS (AP)—The Ohio Farm Bureau Federation favors continued government price supports of 90 per cent of parity temporarily and on basic crops already supported.

A vote of nearly 3-1 passed a resolution so stating as the federation ended its three-day annual meeting here yesterday.

The federation said farmers must move gradually away from high, rigid price supports because they tend to price farmers out of world markets "and make inefficient use of our agricultural resources."

The price support resolution said in part:

"We will support temporarily, because of the present cost-price squeeze in agriculture, a 90 per cent price support program but only on those basic commodities which are presently being supported at that level."

"WE MUST now hold the line and move gradually away from high, rigid price supports since such supports tend to price the American farmer out of world markets and make inefficient use of our agricultural resources."

A recent poll taken two weeks ago of 14,300 federation farmers disclosed 72 per cent favoring price support. Thirty-six per cent favoring supports voted for 90 per cent, 29 per cent for 75-90 per cent supports, 22 per cent for disaster support only, and 13 per cent favoring 100 per cent of parity payments.

A similar poll taken last May showed that only 17 per cent of Ohio's farmers favored 90 per cent parity.

The farmers also insisted diverted acreage (land the government tells the farmer he can't plant in price supported crops) be used only for grazing and soil building.

Diverted acreage could be extended to planting of non-supported crops, the group said, possibly resulting in conditions endangering America's farm program. These conditions, it said, might be the tying up of billions of dollars in basic commodity surpluses as well as accumulation of non-supported commodities.

THE FEDERATION also passed a resolution opposing extension of social security to farmers and favoring:

Complete rural mail delivery to every farm home, immediate U. S. participation in construction of the St. Lawrence Seaway, construction of Hell's Canyon Dam on the Snake River in Idaho for low cost electric power and phosphate fertilizer.

Tightening of the Ohio strip-mining act, creation of a state emergency fund to meet cattle disease outbreaks, a $60 annual tax on house trailers, and federal and state financial aid to the southern Ohio atomic area.

Allies Bat Zero Again With POWs

Another 30 South Koreans Shun Efforts To Woo Them To Freedom

PANMUNJOM (AP)—A second group of 30 South Koreans today unanimously chose life under the Communists, giving Allied persuaders a total blank for two days of efforts to woo home bawky war prisoners.

There was no violence, but many prisoners were more talkative than the 30 who yesterday listened passively to ROK explainers, then chose communism.

The U. N. Command said 30 more South Koreans of 323 who refused repatriation will be interviewed tomorrow.

There was no indication when 22 Americans and 1 Briton who stayed with the Communists will be called.

Some South Korean prisoners interviewed marched into the explanation tents singing Communist songs and chanting slogans.

But the interviews went so smoothly that a young Polish major serving as a repatriation commission observer began nodding and finally went to sleep.

THERE WAS one dramatic scene when a young prisoner walked into the tent and recognized an ROK explainer as a friend from a South Korean army unit.

Both fought in the 2nd Battalion of the U. S. 5th Regimental Combat Team, 24th division.

The ROK major and the prisoner talked together for two hours, much of the time discussing the prisoner's family in South Korea.

Finally the POW said he had nothing against the major personally, but that he could "not return to South Korea as long as President

Syngman Rhee remains in power."

The two shook hands and the prisoner walked out the door designated for those who choose to remain with the Communists.

One interview captive walked out the other door, apparently choosing to go home. But after walking 200 yards with South Korean guards he appeared to discover his error and darted back to the explanation tent.

ROK intelligence officers said he apparently walked out the repatriation door in a staged attempt to embarrass Allied persuaders.

For the most part the prisoners listened quietly to promises of promotions, back pay, reunions with families and pardons for crimes committed in North Korea. But many tried to wind up the interview with political speeches which Indian aides cut off quickly.

The position of Circleville's Rotary Club on the city's annexation program was declared to be "all settled" Thursday after the group's weekly meeting in Elks Lodge.

President Fritz Sieverts said no new action was taken on the plan and pointed out the organization had "endorsed" it some time ago. It had previously been announced, however, that some members of the club opposed the plan and that a final decision was likely this week.

Sieverts said it is his understanding that the matter is all settled as far as Rotary's position is concerned. Many other civic groups have also joined in support of the move to annex a large area north of the corporation.

Pickaway County commissioners are now studying the plan.

LATEST PUBLIC comments on the city's proposal included the following:

Mrs. Marjorie Brown, beauty shop operator:

"We definitely need the annexation for there certainly isn't enough room now for all the people in Circleville, and those who are coming here daily to make the city their home."

J. W. Adkins, Jr., attorney:

"It is the only practical thing to do."

Franklin County Sues Conservancy District For Fund

COLUMBUS (AP)—Franklin County today sued to recover more than $7,000 it lent the Scioto-Sandusky Conservancy District.

The county also asked a restraining order preventing further expenditures by the district pending action of the court.

Franklin County Prosecutor Frank H. Kearns said the county lent the district a total of $7,036.45. The first loan was made in 1935, Kearns said.

Since 1948, the district has been financially able to repay the debt, the suit states.

District directors, named as defendants, are Joseph V. Van Meter of Chillicothe, Howard S. Guthery of Marion, John H. Dunlap Jr. of Williamsport and C. T. Lindblom of Columbus.

A hearing on the temporary restraining order will be held Dec. 12, Kearns said.

CLEVELAND (AP)—Ohio's Un-American Activities Commission had nine new names from a two-day hearing here to add today to 30 no-answer witnesses in other hearings it has held.

Sidney Isaacs, the commission's chief counsel, said the nine who refused to answer questions here would be cited, along with the others, for contempt.

"The character of the witnesses in the Cleveland hearings was enough to stamp them as something apart," said Isaacs. "It was their complete hostility, their sneering, snarling, lip-curling contempt for authority of the state and for government."

Communists Cast Only Votes Against

Vitriolic East-West Exchange Heard Ahead Of Assembly Ballot

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (AP)—The U. N. General Assembly today expressed its "grave concern" at Red atrocities in Korea and approved an American call for stiff condemnation of such actions.

Over bitter Soviet opposition, the 60-nation Assembly approved a Western-sponsored resolution of condemnation by a vote of 42 to 5.

The balloting followed three days of vitriolic debate in which the United States accused the North Koreans and Chinese Communists of killing nearly 38,000 U. N. soldiers and civilians in Korea as a part of high Kremlin policy.

Five negative votes were cast by the Soviet bloc. Ten abstentions were mostly by Asian and Arab nations.

According to terms of the resolution, sponsored by the U. S., Britain, France, Turkey and Australia, the Assembly specifically:

1. EXPRESSES its grave concern at reports and information that North Korean and Chinese Communist forces have, in a large number of instances, employed inhuman practices against the heroic soldiers of forces under the United Nations command in Korea and against the civilian population in Korea.

2. Condemns the commission by any governments or authorities of murder, mutilation, torture, and other atrocious acts against captured military personnel or civilian populations, as a violation of rules of international law and basic standards of conduct and morality and as affronting human rights and

Flute Player Challenging Trombonist

MEXICO CITY (AP)—A flute player, dishonorably discharged from the Mexican army for playing sour notes at the Falcon Dam dedication, has challenged his accuser to a musical duet—flute versus a trombone.

Sgt. Silvestre Mayorga was ousted in disgrace for what his superior called playing false notes in a rendition of the national anthem in the presence of Presidents Eisenhower and Ruiz Cortines, Mayorga appealed.

At a hearing yesterday he said he played for 15 years with symphonic orchestras and the ballet and with the orchestra at the Palace of Fine Arts.

Trombone player Amador Perez, director of the army band, had little training by comparison, Mayorga said, and knew little or nothing about flutes.

Furthermore, Mayorga said, he would be happy to meet Perez on the field of honor and let experts decide whether he could twiddle the flute better than Perez could woot with the trombone.

Farmer Admits Setting Barn Afire

XENIA (AP)—Sheriff C. A. Stewart last night said Charles Smith, 28, confessed he left his Thanksgiving Day dinner and set fire to a barn on a farm across the road "just for the thrill."

The sheriff said Smith, who lives outside nearby Treblein, stated he returned to his family holiday festivities and waited until volunteer firemen arrived. The 200-foot long barn was destroyed. Smith and his father, Basil Smith, were left in charge of the barn and other property on the adjoining farm by the owner, Mrs. John McCalmont, who moved to Colorado.

French On Hand For Big 3 Meet

Laniel Lands In Bermuda Isles, Eisenhower To Fly In Tomorrow

BERMUDA (AP)—French Premier Joseph Laniel, flying across the Atlantic, arrived here today to attend the Big Three's Bermuda conference. He was reported bringing a full bag of requests for Prime Minister Churchill and President Eisenhower.

Habitually late-rising Churchill left an early call to meet the American-built Constellation bringing Laniel, Foreign Minister Georges Bidault and a staff of 17.

Eisenhower arrives tomorrow from Washington and the five days of talk start that afternoon.

To the Americans, the major task of the conference is to prod the balky French National Assembly into ratifying the European Defense Community Pact. It provides for a unified West European army including troops from France's long-time enemy Germany.

Laniel can promise nothing because his government must resign Jan. 17, a month after France's new president is elected.

BUT HE reportedly was bringing a raft of conditions which French sources say must be met before there is any chance for Assembly approval of German rearmament.

These include:

1. British-American agreement to pressure the West Germans into agreeing that the Saar Basin, rich in coal and steel, will remain politically autonomous but linked economically to France. It was German before World War II and the Germans want it back.

2. British and American assurances that they won't pull their troops off the continent and leave the French to face rearmend Germans alone.

3. Continued American help against the Communist-led rebels in Indochina, or Allied diplomatic support for a negotiated settlement with Ho Chi Minh's forces.

4. British-American agreement to Moscow's proposal for a Big Four foreign ministers meeting.

Of these, only the Saar seems a major stumbling block.

Resurgent West Germany so far has given no sign of conceding anything on that question.

New Aviation Union Seeking To Oust CIO

COLUMBUS (AP)—A group seeking to replace Local 927, CIO-UAW a bargaining unit at the Columbus North American plant said it plans to file incorporation papers for a new union with the Ohio secretary of state.

Leaders of the new group say many persons applying for membership in their union, which will be called the Independent Aircraft Workers Assn., are former members of Local 927.

North American officials said 2,020 UAW members, 17 per cent of the local's membership, have quit since the union struck for higher pay and other benefits.

Early this week a UAW spokesman called the dissident group a "phone booth" organization trying to stall negotiations between strikers and company.

Robert P. Stith, Franklin County welfare director, said more than 500 striking employees are now drawing welfare checks and estimated the cost at up to $20,000 a month.

North American officials left Los Angeles yesterday for Cincinnati where the National Labor Relations Board is to hear charges today by the union that the Columbus plant engaged in unfair labor practices.

The union lodged complaints that the company photographed pickets. Similar charges brought against officials of the Fresno plant have been dismissed.

Rewards Posted In Strike Tiff

COLUMBUS (AP)—Five rewards of $5,000 each were posted today by the management of the strike-bound North American Aviation jet plane plant here for information leading to the arrest and conviction of persons who set off explosives and damaged the property of five employees.

The five incidents occurred Monday and Tuesday. No one was injured. The CIO-United Auto Workers Union, Local 927, struck the Columbus plant Oct. 23.

Communists Cast Only Votes Against

the dignity and worth of the human person.

Russian Delegate Andrei Vishinsky said he and his allies voted against the resolution because it was "libelous, spurious and hypocritical."

India already had announced she would not vote on the resolution, explaining this was because of her position as head of the Neutral Nations Repatriation Commission.

BEFORE THE vote, a heated debate had included stinging denunciations of Red atrocities by a parade of Western nations and angry counter thrusts from the Soviet bloc. The latter sought to prove that American and South Korean troops were the real atrocity perpetrators.

The final result was a verbal duel between Chief U. S. Delegate Henry Cabot Lodge Jr. and Russia's Andrei Vishinsky.

At the peak of the debate, Lodge charged that North Korea's military commander, Gen. Nam Il, masterminded the bloody Kojin prison riots during the armistice negotiations at Panmunjom. Lodge also challenged Red Cross committee make an unfettered check of the U. S.-alleged Red atrocities.

In quick retort, Vishinsky angrily denounced the Nam Il charge as "absurd" and unsupported by facts. The Russian declared the American challenge for a Red Cross probe was "an 11th-hour approach, obviously of a demagogic nature."

EUB Seminary Directors Named

DAYTON (AP)—The administrative council of the Evangelical United Brethren Church has named 17 men to a board of directors in preparation for the merging of the church's two seminaries. Three more directors for the combined seminary are still to be named.

Named to the board of directors were: Dr. C. M. Bowman, Westerville; Dr. William K. Messmer, Dayton; and Torrey A. Kaatz, Toledo.

GRAIN FUTURES

CHICAGO (AP)—Demand for oats stood out in an otherwise erratic grain market on the Board of Trade today.

Buying in oats stemmed from the fact navigation on the Great Lakes soon will be shut down. Wheat started off easy and then rallied. Old crop corn and soybean contracts eased on expanded offerings of cash grain.

Wheat near noon was 1 to 2½ higher, December $2.04, corn ¼ lower to ¾ higher, December $1.56½, oats ¼-½ higher, December 78½, soybeans 1½-1¾ higher, January $3.12, and hard 10 to 27 cents a hundred pounds lower, December $17.20.

Weekly Food Review

By Associated Press

Beef looks like your best in meat this week, the men who run the nation's food stores agree. Leg of lamb also will be a special attraction in many markets. A number of stores have picked pot roast as a weekend feature. There will be specials on sirloin and porterhouse steak, ground beef and other cuts in various sections of the country. Stores featuring leg of lamb plan to trim a few cents a pound from prices. Elsewhere, price tags will be about the same as a week ago to a little higher. Scattered stores will offer lower prices on pork loin, but in general pork will be higher. Rises of two to four cents a pound are planned for center cut pork chops. Frying chickens will be selling at about the same price levels that prevailed a week ago. But eggs will be distinctly cheaper in most stores. According to the National Poultry and Egg Board, egg prices have declined about 15 cents a dozen at wholesale since Nov. 23. As a result, prices are coming down at the retail level. Declines will range from six cents a dozen to as much as 12 cents. Butter prices will be about the same in most stores. The U.S. Department of Agriculture came up with a long list of "outstanding buys" including iceberg lettuce, beans, cabbage, potatoes, brussels sprouts and cauliflower. "Good buys" are cucumbers, eggplant, escarole, onions, sweet potatoes and squash. Peas, celery and tomatoes moved higher in the wholesale markets.

Supplies of tomatoes were especially light. Peas and apples offer the best values in fruit, produce men said. Oranges, lemons, grapefruit and tangerines declined a bit at wholesale. Burns Prove Fatal CINCINNATI (AP)—Burns, suffered when her clothing caught fire, caused the death here yesterday of Mrs. Dora Becker, 77. Mrs. Becker's clothing was ignited as she tried to light a gas stove.

OPERATION LONGSTRIDE

Fast, Home-Based Striking Power
Goal of U. S. Strategic Air Command

This rare view, down the fuel boom, shows an F-84G refueling en route from Georgia to North Africa. Tanker plane is a KC-97.

By Central Press

FAIRFORD, England—Ever hear of Operation Longstride? Or Changing the Aerial Guard? Things are happening to protect this nation from far-flung bases. Operation Longstride is a symbol of the larger picture. Let's take a look.

The Strategic Air Command recently vaulted two batches of jet fighter planes across the Atlantic. It was the longest non-stop jet flight in history.

Primarily, the operation was a further test of—and proof of—SAC's ability to move large numbers of fighters in an intercontinental hurry. Actually, the numbers in this case were not large but they were sufficient to prove the feasibility of a mass mission.

Seventeen Thunderjets of the 508th Strategic Fighter Wing flew 4,485 non-stop miles from Turner Air Force Base, Albany, Georgia, to this British town. In the other phase of the two-headed operation, the 31st Wing sent eight F-84s from Turner to Nouasseur, in French Morocco, 4,470 miles away.

IT WAS the 31st, commanded by Col. Dave Schilling, which last year pioneered a similar type of mission across the Pacific, though with stops along the way. Now, like a good halfback, SAC's fighter strength has proved it can go in either direction.

Even the best of halfbacks, however, needs an assist to go the full distance. In the case of jet fighters the assist is provided by aerial refueling.

Earlier transocean fighter flights were refueled by Boeing KB-29s, World War II bombers converted to tankers. In Operation Longstride, the aerial gas stations were Boeing KC-97s, which have by now become the standard for refueling.

NINETY-SEVEN of the 26th Air Refueling Squadron, working out of the eastern-Atlantic station in the Azores, fueled the England-bound Thunderjets. The 305th Refueling Squadron gassed up the fighters en route to Africa, using Bermuda as its base.

Aerial refueling such as this has given short-range fighter aircraft the seven-league boots that have lengthened their stride to global proportions.

Refueling aloft makes the Atlantic a two-way street for both our jet fighters and bombers. Not long ago two complete wings spanned the ocean, one east, one west.

The move constituted the first changing of SAC's most potent overseas guard. The 306th Bombardment Wing was brought home after three months' duty in England; simultaneously, the 305th went to Britain for a three months stay, and intensive training.

Such moves may be expected periodically in the future, to be carried out without fanfare as piston-powered B-50 wings have been shifted in the past.

SOME of the 306th's 45 planes returned directly from Fairford to their home field at Tampa's MacDill Air Force Base. It was a 4,450-mile flight. Fastest time for the hop was nine hours, seven minutes.

The return home was a three-day operation, one 15-plane squadron making the flight each day. The planes of the 305th, England-bound, flew from MacDill to England the same three days, going by way of Limestone Air Force Base in Maine.

With more B-47 wings in service, the program of Britain-based training for America's jet-bomber outfits is now an established procedure. Uncle Sam's global guard is jet-powered for keeps.

Britain Loaded With Funds For Pirates, Red Flannels

LONDON (AP)—There's a million-dollar nest egg available here in Britain to ransom anybody captured by Barbary Coast pirates.

And there's a $9,000 fund to build a pest house and graveyard in the heart of London—in case plague breaks out.

The Barbary Coast pirates went out of business more than 120 years ago and there hasn't been a plague outbreak in London for 200 years, but the money is still there waiting to be used—together with an estimated 560 million dollars locked up in 110,000 charities set up by tenderhearted Britons through the centuries.

At least a quarter of these charities are more than 100 years old. Approximately 3,000 of them have annual incomes of less than $70. Nobody knows how many of their purposes are outdated now.

There are funds to provide red flannel underclothes for poor old women and waistcoats for poor old men. There are free coal, bread and cheese to be had for the asking. There are cash grants for out-of-luck tailors, weavers and felt workers.

The size of the bequests varies from tiny village charities of a few shillings—made even smaller by rising living costs—to huge million-pound trusts like the Nuffield Foundation with an income of $280,000 a year.

Each trust—big or small—is hedged with legal safeguards to make sure it is properly administered.

Under British law if the original purpose of a trust is outdated, the courts alone have the power to make a change. Even then the money must go for a purpose as near as possible to the original.

The Barbary pirate trust, for instance, has been out of date since the French drove the pirates

Report 22 Years Late For Diploma

BREWER, Maine (AP)—Avery D. Olmstead is working on a book report, 22 years overdue, that held up the Brewer High School diploma he should have received in 1931.

The East Orrington man said he wants the diploma for Christmas—which also is his 48th birthday.

School Principal Melvin T. Leighton said, "We have his diploma. School officials have authorized me to give him the diploma when he completes the book report."

They applied then to have the income given to impoverished clergymen, but the wheel turned full circle when the court directed that a proportion of the money be given to organizations fighting slavery in parts of Africa and Arabia.

To sort out the tangle of these trusts the former Labor government set up a royal commission three years ago.

For many months the commission tackled the confusion. It recently reported there isn't much that can be done.

two Ohio State University history professors, Dr. Eugene H. Rosenboom and Dr. Francis P. Weisenburger.

Scientists Thrown For Loss With Piltdown Hoax Expose

NEW YORK (AP)—Now that "Piltdown" has been exposed as a hoax, where does man stand in his knowledge about evolution?

The answer: just about where he did before that famous fossil skull was found to be a fraud.

In fact, the exposure clears the air. Physical anthropologists have been viewing Piltdown with skepticism for years.

When the pieces of skull and jawbone were found in an English gravel pit near the Sussex village of Piltdown between 1912 and 1915 some scientists concluded they were parts of the same creature who lived anywhere from 50,000 to 500,000 years ago.

On the basis of evidence then at hand, Piltdown seemed to them to be either a superior type of sub-human or a sub-normal type of true human. Yet his head was curiously different from those of other pre-historic men found in various parts of the world. He was a puzzle in the whole evolutionary picture.

Dr. Harry Shapiro, head of the department of anthropology of the American Museum of Natural History, says Piltdown "never was consistent with other data. He was out of line chronologically. His removal, instead of weakening, in effect strengthens our knowledge of the evolutionary process."

Prof. Ernst A. Hooton of Harvard, one of the world's most famous anthropologists, says the hoax "doesn't disturb our ideas of human evolution at all. If it is right that the head is a fake, it loses all its significance and removes a very puzzling link."

In England, Piltdown's time-stained skull and ape-like jawbone have become the butt of cartoonist's jibes and comedians' jokes. In this country some fundamentalist churchmen, who maintain that man was created in his present image about 6,000 years ago, have used the Piltdown hoax as a lever to pry at the whole theory of evolution.

Actually, scientists say the only disservice that possibly could come from exposure of the Piltdown fake would be widespread skepticism about other important discoveries of mankind's vestigial past.

People usually bandy the phrase "man came from monkeys." Most authorities today agree there are five families in that part of the living animal kingdom to which man belongs—the human family, the great anthropoids, the small anthropoids, the old world monkeys and the new world monkeys. All developed from the same stem hundreds of thousands of years ago, which is quite a different thing from saying "man came from monkeys."

In the study of mankind's evolution through fossils the most important discovery was made in Java in 1892 by a young Dutch physician, Eugene Dubois. He found the famous Java Man skull—an ape man twice the size of a gorilla who prowled the volcanic slopes of ancient Java possibly 750,000 years ago, a real missing link between ape and man.

About the same period another giant peered out of a cave near modern Peking. Imagine a 1,000-pound brute with over-size jaw and under-size brain, even bigger and tougher than Java Man. His fossil remains were discovered in 1929 by Franz Weidenreich, who—incidentally—was convinced that Piltdown was a phony.

A third giant was added to this company in 1948 when Robert Bloom, a renowned anthropologist, found its petrified remains in South Africa.

CLAYTON FRITCHEY, deputy chairman of the Democratic National Committee, is shown during a TV broadcast from Washington in which he charged that the Justice Department had used the Harry Dexter White case to cover failures in probing racketeering in St. Louis and Detroit. Earlier he declared the F.B.I. had refused aid to former U. S. Attorney Charles E. Vignelli in prosecuting two Denver gamblers. (International)

Nobody Speaking To Officers Now

SHAWNEE, Okla. (AP)—Two kind policemen picked up a skunk, run over by a car, and took him to police headquarters at City Hall, believing him to be a pet—the deodorized variety.

But there the ungrateful skunk cut loose with a blast that sent officers Ernie Coleman and Henry Shelton running for cover. Now nobody around City Hall will speak to them.

HARRY SNARR, 42, shows scratches on his forehead and hand to Dr. Herman Bundesen of the Chicago Health Department, at St. Luke's Hospital, where Snarr was given anti-rabies injections. Snarr was said to be the "Mr. X" sought for about a week by authorities after the dog that bit him died of rabies. (International Soundphoto)

A LOATHSOME TRAFFIC

ASSERTION OF HARRY J. Anslinger, federal narcotics commissioner, that the traffic in narcotics has increased considerably on the West Coast and that it is smuggled in from China suggests a plot of which the Communist world has long been accused.

It is a two-pronged plot. One part of it is to get money to finance the Communist infiltration program in the free countries and the other is to encourage consumption of the vicious drugs in the free world to undermine morality and resistance to Communist expansion.

In meeting this threat the U. S. has gone as far as it can by law. All such traffic is strictly prohibited. But the drug trade is so stealthy that it is not always possible to detect importations secreted among the effects of sailors and others.

Anslinger's proposal is that the U. S. multiply its efforts to break up the narcotics rings and give the loathsome agents far stiffer penalties. Since the dope peddlers concentrate particularly on American youths, it is difficult to imagine the judges and juries erring on the side of harshness. As Anslinger says, they should "throw the book" at the dopers.

If the Communist lands were conscientious and cooperative, they would help fight the narcotics menace and eliminate it. But with their side cheering for the law-breakers and aiding them, America can only attempt to make such horrible examples of the dope agents as to deter them.

BOON TO AMERICA

RAMON MAGSAYSAY'S smashing victory over President Quirino in the Philippine presidential elections is heartening to America for three reasons: (1) it testifies to the opportunities of a natural born leader in democracy, justifying the Islands' claim as the "showcase of democracy in the Pacific"; (2) it confirms the prevalence of strong pro-American, anti-Communist sentiment in the Philippines, the pro-Magsaysay bias of the American people having been actively injected into the campaign, and (3) it promises to give the Islands the kind of progressive, fair-minded administration that should solidify the Philippines' position even further as a leading anti-Red bastion in the Pacific.

Magsaysay's chances were never seriously in doubt. It was felt that only a rigged election would defeat him, but in so doing it might also have jeopardized the very continuation of a Philippine democracy. Rising out of obscurity, Magsaysay had captured the imagination of the people in the way he checked the Communist-led "Huk" rebellion while Quirino's secretary of defense.

They look to him now to institute social

news behind the news

WASHINGTON — Despite Adlai E. Stevenson's continued coyness with respect to his 1956 plans and prospects, Democratic leaders everywhere now believe that he is an active candidate for a presidential renomination. His remarks during his recent sally through the South have removed any doubt on the question from their minds.

A key factor in their belief is that the 1952 nominee will not say flatly that he would not like to try it again. His invariable response was that "I don't know my future political plans, and if I did, I wouldn't tell you." That is not the answer of a man who has decided irrevocably to withdraw from politics or public life.

His five-month tour of 30 countries was not the action of a man whose first experience in national politics had embittered or disillusioned him. He actually enjoyed the honors that were showered upon him, although the endless rounds of receptions, dinners, addresses and press conferences wore out the relatively young men who accompanied him. He accumulated a fund of data that would be invaluable to

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

The Republican Party, after 20 years out of power, still finds it difficult to develop sufficient political leadership to produce a passable legislative program for Congress and a fighting organization among the people. The death of Senator Robert A. Taft left a void that has not yet been filled. President Eisenhower continues to remain aloof from party politics. The 1954 campaign is already here, but the Republicans are quarreling among themselves because no one exhibits the strength to compose the differences among the various leaders.

The realistic fact is that President Eisenhower does not like being a politician. He has never been a politician. He has been a brilliant success as a soldier and has achieved distinction as a diplomat, but not as a technical party politician.

Nevertheless, two-party politics is the method by which the United States governs itself. The alternative to our system would be a revolution by which one party or one individual would prevail. The danger is that unless President Eisenhower assumes the political leadership of the Republican Party, it will dissipate itself into a disastrous factionalism.

Even Franklin D. Roosevelt, as astute a politician as history records, could not treat elected officials, Senators and Representatives, and Cabinet members as though they were top sergeants. He might have fooled them by his brilliant double-talk, he might have cajoled them by patronage, but he never ignored them.

I was present at the dinner of the B'nai B'rith in Washington at which the President delivered a speech that could be interpreted as a pleasantry or an attack on Senators McCarthy and Jenner, on his own Attorney General, Herbert Brownell, Jr., and on the Director of the FBI, J. Edgar Hoover. It was not a good speech because, on the whole, it was unsuited for the occasion, but it was pleasant in spots.

This was on Monday night. On Tuesday night, Senator Joe McCarthy hit back with a block-buster that shook and split the Republican Party. Obviously, Joe McCarthy accepted Monday night's challenge and got even. Considering the mildness of the President's statement on Monday, McCarthy's reply on Tuesday was too strong. Maybe he wanted it that way to bring on a test of strength. The immediate effect is a very split party.

Now, if Eisenhower decides to even the score, the cleavage within the Republican Party will continue to widen until, in 1954, the Democrats could win both the House and the Senate. In some states, such as Massachusetts, McCarthy can win the election for the Republicans or he can bring on a defeat for his own party. Practical politicians recognize his immense strength. They blame Eisenhower for permitting any individual in his party to grow politically stronger than the President. Nevertheless, they admit that they have no way of reaching Eisenhower on a political level. (Continued on Page Thirteen) and economic reforms that will narrow the gap between the many and the privileged few. His election, in brief was a mandate to end the feudalism that prevails in many Far Eastern countries. How well he succeeds will directly influence opportunities for popular governments elsewhere in the Pacific.

The average American still wonders whether Tito's brand of Communism is better than Malenkov's.

Allergies Rarely Hereditary

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

ALLERGY is a medical term being greatly misused lately by many lay persons. It is receiving the blame for everything from marital incompatibility to plain laziness, as in the case of the individual who is allergic to work.

Increased Sensitivity
Actually, it is a form of increased sensitivity which may affect various tissues of the body. It is the result of exposure to a substance to which the individual is extremely sensitive. The reaction develops whenever this substance is contacted, even on the smallest scale.

There are many types of allergies. An individual may have hay fever, asthma, hives, or severe skin symptoms due to his over-sensitivity to one or more substances contacted.

Common Query
A frequent question asked the doctor is whether allergy tends to run in families. Until recently, it was thought that allergy, which occurs in about ten per cent of the population, was on a somewhat hereditary basis.

Recently, a detailed study was made of 250 allergic children and their families. The ages of the children ranged from infancy to 16 years.

Only a little more than ten per cent of these children's parents were allergic and only seven per cent of the grandparents; and allergy was present in only nine per cent of their brothers and sisters. It was found that there was a tendency for allergy to appear in fairly large numbers in only a certain few families.

Evidence was also discovered to show that the presence of allergy in both parents would not necessarily lead to an increased tendency toward allergy in the children. When one member of a set of twins was allergic, the other did not necessarily develop an allergy.

The Major Factors
Every individual is potentially capable of developing an allergy. It is believed that the amount of exposure to the substance causing the allergy, and the degree to which it penetrates the tissue cells, are the major factors in determining its onset. Heredity is not now considered an important factor.

QUESTION AND ANSWER
Mrs. S. V.: I gave birth to a baby by Caesarean section and the baby died from a bowel obstruction nine days later. Do you think I can have a normal child if I become pregnant again?

Answer: There is no evident reason why you should not have a healthy child even though you had an unfortunate occurrence with your first pregnancy.

Thanksgiving Day has come and gone but the memory—along with turkey sandwiches, turkey hash, turkey croquettes and turkey soup—lingers on and on and on.

A gasheated suit for outdoor workers has been invented. Might be an idea, too, for some after-dinner speakers we've listened to.

William Shakespeare certainly knew what he was talking about when he quipped: "What's in a name?" Actress Jinx Falkenberg was in an omnibus crash and, fortunately, wasn't hurt the least little bit.

CHAPTER THIRTEEN

THIS was it, obviously. This was the paper on which Velora had written the day they'd played stream-of-consciousness. Velora thought no one ever touched her things. Quick now, read it, see if it sheds any light, then get it back the same way you got it. And if you can't get it back? Don't think about that, just read.

Policeman (Velora had written). The policeman on the corner. I suppose I could be arrested for what I'm doing, it would be almost worth it, I think he's finally beginning to be afraid, I know him so well, I've watched him so long, I can see things others wouldn't. His hand shaking just a bit as he holds a cigarette, for instance. But he's baffled, I'm the last person he'd think of, he thinks I'm a machine. Well, a woman can take just so much, even a machine sometimes kicks back. To think I was once enamored of that madman. And he is. I think there's something psycho what you call it about him. Oh, yes, he's worried, but I can't tell yet whether I've really hit on something, but it always seemed odd to me. I know he had some outside contact with that model, I recognized her voice though she only called once or twice. She was a nice happy young girl, everything to live for, in here one day and dead the next. The paper said an overdose of sleeping pills, models are always doing it, no one was suspicious, but why all the gas turned on too? Time will tell, I can wait.

All the gas turned on! Hurry, get this back in the drawer, think about it later. But this paper ought to be saved, for future reference. You can't risk keeping it, she mustn't know that you know. Once again Charlotte picked up her copy folder and hurried toward Velora's desk; once again she maneuvered open the drawer and slid the paper back.

"Something you're looking for, Charlotte?"
King! Appearing silently out of nowhere, as he had a knack of doing. Like a barfly. His icy eyes looked out like a stranger's behind a mask.

"Yes," Charlotte said. "I was looking for something to steal, any old thing, just for the thrill of stealing it." She turned and walked away.
If you hate enough, you're equal to anything. Anything. If only his curiosity hadn't been aroused. If only he didn't search in the drawer. But there came Velora with a carton of coffee; he wouldn't look while she was around, and he wouldn't mention seeing Charlotte till he had checked. She had a little time. Now think. Take it point by point. A model who'd done some work for Delafield's. A nice, happy young girl—putty in King's beautiful hands that loved to mold and shape? Misshape, Charlotte amended.

Maybe she'd become troublesome, or boring, maybe he could not stand anyone's being a nice, happy young thing. Since King couldn't be happy, he hated anyone else to be, Charlotte knew. So the model had died, with all the gas turned on.
Was it perhaps a pattern? Didn't murderers sometimes follow a pattern? Murderer!
Charlotte believed King was. And Velora thought him psychopathic.
Had the gas been meant for Charlotte, not the cats? No, he knew she wasn't home; the gas hadn't been meant for her. Not yet.
Now take it easy, you're overwrought. You're as bad as Van Camp, both your minds distorted by hate.
But April and May didn't commit suicide.
The choking lump came back in her throat, thinking of them. A man mustn't be allowed to get away with it. But if she could bargain . . . First find out who the model was, somehow, then go in to King and bargain. My freedom for silence. My freedom such as it would be. Or would he begrudge me even that? Would he . . . ?
Charlotte tried to tell herself she wasn't afraid. This tremor, this headache, this sinking in the pit of her stomach came from want of food. She'd go out for a late lunch.

She was in the old-fashioned elevator, and she could see all the way down the void of the next shaft. When customers began to press in at the fifth floor, the new kind of terror attacked her. It had hands about her strangled throat and bands about her chest; she couldn't get her breath; something beat in her brain. She was trapped with these people, she had to get out of the elevator before she hurried down into emptiness. At the fourth floor she pushed out frantically. She leaned against a lingerie counter, waiting for the clump of her heart to subside. Claustrophobia, just a touch of claustrophobia, lots of people have it, she told herself.
I can't go on, not like this I can't.
She went on and actually ate lunch, but all around her at the drugstore counter she seemed to see only defeated faces, as though everyone had failed to be what they had meant to be. Expressions of worry, mouths that had sampled the sweet, the sour and the tasteless. You, there, plain Jane, reading the astrology magazine. What is it you hope the stars have in store for you? And you, with the brave pink feather, staring blankly, what do you see? You, face lost in fat, you look as though you've given up. Your lips move, talking to yourself; is there no one else who will listen? What about you, homely, homely man? How must it be to face yourself? Each sat absorbed in his own problem. I should but I can't, they said to themselves. I will but I shouldn't. So they flipped coins, went to gypsy fortunetellers, consulted clergymen, psychiatrists and Mr. Anthony. And in the end, right or wrong, the forces in favor of one side were too strong to resist.

I can't, but I must, Charlotte said to herself.
The moment she returned to the office, she sensed something in the air.
"Van Camp's been robbed," Tim explained.
"Robbed?" Charlotte echoed. Apprehension swept her. Not the paper, please, not that. But wait, be a poker face.
It seemed to her that everyone watched her. "You mean someone took her purse?" Charlotte kept her voice casual.

"No. A personal letter, she says," Norma said. "That's all she'll say. Mystery! Intrigue! Do you suppose it's a love letter?"
A personal letter . . . So it was, it must be. How had King managed it? Probably he'd sent Velora down in the store to do an errand. But of course, Velora wouldn't know who took it.

Charlotte glanced over at Velora's fear-filled face. Panic stretched her eyes, perspiration beaded her forehead, and she kept passing her palms over her skirt. Well, crime and punishment, Charlotte addressed her silently. Ask me. It's a little late now to wonder where you'll get another job, they don't grow on bushes for a little nondescript of forty. Personnel managers care so little that one has an invalid mother to support. But I'll make a little bet King won't fire you. Chances are he'll never mention this, he'll just let you torture yourself with it, drive you crazy wondering . . . "Maybe you've just mislaid it," Charlotte soothed.

But Velora never mislaid anything.
Mario spoke. "If I may make noises like an Advertising Manager," he said, "I'd like to remind you all there's a little matter of deadline, remember?"
Charlotte started typing, but the humming hive of questions kept swarming in her brain. She had to stop and sort this out, try to get it all straight.

All right, I'll try. Point one: King can't know whether I read the letter, he may think he got there in time to thwart my attempt. Point two: he knows I know something, else why would I be looking for it? Point three: what is point three? I guess the point is what he'd do if he thought I suspected. Well, what would he do? I don't know; I can't even imagine.

He was the kind of man who imagined he had every disease he read about. He didn't even believe the life insurance doctors after they gave him a clean bill of health. When he came home from a month's vacation, his secretary enthused, "I don't think I ever saw you with such a wonderful tan." But he replied gloomily, "You should see how pale I still am—underneath!"

It's a simple matter for some women to square accounts with hated rivals—particularly if money is no object. Empress Josephine, for instance, was told by Napoleon she must receive a lady she detested. Josephine found out that her foe planned to wear a deep green dress Napoleon had admired. So Josephine had her drawing room completely redecorated in a shade of blue that would ruin the effect of the green dress! And it did!

LOWLY LEAD PENCIL—WE USE MORE THAN BILLION A YEAR

Chewing a lead pencil helps one's train of thought. It's habit we all started so early nobody remembers just when.

By Central Press
NEW YORK — Those commonplace wooden lead pencils on your office desk or in the bureau drawer at home may all look alike to you, like peas in a pod, but don't be deceived by their twin-like appearance. The lead pencil may not have changed in appearance, but it has changed with the times, keeping pace with the march of progress.

Altogether, there are some 350 different kinds of wood-cased pencils now available. Included among them are pencils which write on cellophane, metal or fabric.

There are special pencils which are used by surgeons to mark on human skin when performing operations.

There are pencils with leads hard enough to scratch a stone, used by stone carvers and engravers, and there are pencils that will leave a mark on fiery hot ingots, for use in steel mills.

About 1.4 billion wooden lead pencils are sold a year. Roughly, that's just a bit less than 10 pencils a year for every man, woman and child in the United States.

BUSINESS FIRMS are the pencil industry's biggest customers. Your children—the school kids of America—are the next biggest customers of the pencil makers. The United States government ranks third in importance.

Uncle Sam leads all other nations in pencil manufacture—naturally. The first lead pencils were made in the United States about 100 years ago. England first had a world monopoly on pencil manufacture, then France and Germany. Nobody knows who first started writing with a pencil. Graphite was discovered 400 years ago, and the first pencils were crude slabs of graphite wrapped in a rag or twine to keep the graphite from smudging the hands.

Today's lead pencil is a marvelously complex writing instrument, although simple in appearance. More than 100 operations are involved in turning out a single pencil. Raw materials involved in its manufacture come from all over the globe.

THE GRAPHITE for pencils comes from Madagascar, Mexico and Ceylon; clay from Bavaria and England; wood from California; flint stones for grinding the lead from Belgium; rubber for the erasers from Malaya; gold leaf for imprinting the manufacturer's name from South Africa; oil which is mixed with the lead for smooth writing quality, from sperm whales in the Arctic.

The housewife has found many ingenious uses for the modern pencil. Using a lead pencil that will write on glass, she no longer has to spend the time glueing labels on jars of home-made preserves and pickles. She now writes on the jar itself. The message won't rub off.

Using a moisture-resistant pencil employed by professional nurserymen—one that defies the elements—the housewife can tag flower and vegetable beds instead of resorting to the time-worn method of the seed packet for identification.

Housewives have also learned that furniture scratches can be "erased" by rubbing the scratch with a pencil, the lead of which matches the color of the furniture (there are 72 colored lead pencils to choose from).

Homestretch Just Ahead For U.S. Business

Yule Sales Hold Hope, But Some Point To Production Decline

By SAM DAWSON

NEW YORK (AP)—Business goes into the homestretch of the year today with some placing their bets on the Christmas shopper while others put the slump in factory output higher on their dope sheets.

How well the buying public fills its Christmas stocking will solve the worries of merchants who wonder if they've overstocked—or have been too cautious in their ordering and may miss sales.

Industrial production's slip is showing, the federal Reserve Board reports. In November the total output of the nation's mines and factories dipped below the year ago figure for the first time. It's six per cent lower than the postwar peak reached last March.

Usually production rises in November, but this time it slipped below the October level.

Part of the drop was blamed on lower auto production. And James J. Nance, president of Packard Motor Car Co., says the coming year will be "tough and rugged" for his industry.

Eastern bankers, however, have some reassuring words today about the general trend.

The Federal Reserve Bank of Boston reports consumer spending so far this year in New England is slightly above the mark at the same time last year, with Christmas trade to set the final pattern. New Englanders, moreover, have salted away more savings this year than last.

"The moderate and selective decline in business which started last summer appears to have continued in recent weeks without any striking change of pace," the Guaranty Trust Co. of New York reports.

The National City Bank of New York says in its December letter that "business sentiment in general is tending to move from extremes of either pessimism or optimism into the middle ground."

Some businessmen expect a recession and the bank lists their reasons as follows: 1. The big spring spurt was largely due to building up of inventories and consumer debt, and this trend has now about ceased; 2. Consumers have bought so many appliances and other durable goods that demand is bound to slacken; and 3. Wages, costs and prices got out of balance during the long inflationary period, so that now many manufactured goods are priced out of the reach of consumers, notably farmers whose incomes are falling.

But the bank finds many reassuring factors. Government demand for goods and services stays high, with any drop in federal spending likely to be offset by rises

River Pollution Said To Be Soap

WHEELING, W. Va. (AP)—That "strange, white bubbly substance" stretching from shore to shore in the Ohio River has been identified. It's soap.

A. R. Todd, chemist at Wheeling filtration plant, announced today his analysis showed it to be 32 pounds of detergent—a synthetic soap product—to each million gallons of water.

Todd said the detergent might have been accumulating in creeks during the long dry spell from family washings and other cleaning processes and was flushed into the river during the recent light rain.

Teacher Dismissal Upheld By Court

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The Superior Court has upheld the right of the Los Angeles City School Board to dismiss three teachers for refusal to testify before the House Committee on Un-American Activities.

Judge Joseph W. Vickers held yesterday with the school board that the teachers could be dismissed for unprofessional conduct, evident unfitness for office and refusal to obey reasonable regulations.

Counsel for the teachers, Abraham Minkus, Serril L. Gerber and Harry Shepro, said they would appeal.

in local government projects and highway building.

"Lending institutions are sound and liquid," the bank says, "current savings are large, money policy is aimed at stability rather than restriction, and it would be hard to show that money is scarce or will become scarce for worthy projects."

Old-Fashioned Hand-Waved Fan Urged To Give Women Exercise

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (U)—Notes from the oddity almanac:
Has your wife been badgering you to buy her an air-conditioning machine? Why not surprise her with an old-fashioned hand-waved fan this Christmas?
The fan has been a sign of exalted rank among women since the 14th century B. C. in Egypt, when it was considered an emblem of happiness or repose. In ancient India the fan was a sacred symbol, in old Japan a symbol of eternity.
Fans have accented the glamor of famous women from Cleopatra to Sally Rand. The first Queen Elizabeth had 31 fans at her death, including one set with precious jewels, presented her by Sir Francis Drake.
The old-time hand fan won't prevent hay fever, but it has no electrical parts and it is the only instrument on the market today, except the baby buggy, that will give modern woman both fresh air and exercise. A husband who really loves his wife will give her two fans—one for each hand.

Industry-marches-on dept: It is said the quill used by Thomas Jefferson to write the Declaration of Independence came from one of his own geese at Monticello. America's goose quill pen tycoon today is Lewis Glaser of New Haven, Conn., and some 1,000 tourists a month buy his pens at President Jefferson's old home. The quill was one of the first pens to write successfully above water, but it has been found to be equally legible under water—that is, when employed aboard a dry submarine.
Almanac health hint: There are cases on record of children found to be allergic to cosmetics used by their mothers.
Small animals-with-big problems dept: Comedian Jack E. Leonard, who tips the beam at 350 pounds and says he wouldn't lose an ounce if he could, has been fretting recently because the veterinarian says his 3½-pound Chihuahua, named Pat-jack, is overweight.
How-to-get-ahead tips: Get rid of that unsightly mop of hair on your head, mister. Don't just comb it off over the years. Borrow a match and burn it off now. Baldness is on the march. Yul Brynner, star of "The King and I," is so bald he doesn't dare bend over the table when playing a near-sighted opponent at billiards. But he reports women fans write they regard his baldness as a badge of masculinity and a sign of virility.
Almanac historical scoop: what were the last words spoken by Gen. Custer at his famous last stand, the battle of the Little Big Horn? Our firm belief—and nobody can show we're wrong—is that Custer said:
"Je-e-chosaphat! Whoever saw that dad-burned many Indians before?"
Almanac long-range weather forecast: Snow flurries in Alaska, followed before the first of the year by a rising tide of orange peels and discarded sun-burn lotion bottles along the Florida coast.

ANCIENT DEMON TO BE TAMED BY WORLD'S LARGEST BRIDGE

By DAVID A. HELLER
Central Press Correspondent

NEW YORK—Way back in the days when Hector was a pup—literally—and a world traveler named Ulysses was making his voyages, the imagination of the ancient world was captured by one of the most perilous stretches of water known to man—the Messina straits between Italy and Sicily.

So dangerous were these straits that they were immortalized by Homer in his classic poems, The Iliad and The Odyssey. Homer describes the terrors of passing between the legendary twin monsters, Scylla and Charybdis. Scylla was a gigantic, many-headed demon, sitting on the jagged rocks of the Italian shore, who wrecked ships and devoured their seamen.

Charybdis was an irresistible whirlpool on the Sicilian side of the channel which dragged the vessels of sailors brave enough to journey over the waters cursed by the gods to certain disaster.

ACCORDING to the legend, Ulysses sailed between the monsters and escaped—but only after the deaths of many of his brave followers.

The world has changed a great deal between then and now, but one thing remains the same—the Messina straits are still one of the ugliest stretches of water in the world—enough to give any sailor the jitters.

That is why the proposal of the Italian government to tame these twin monsters by building a bridge over them is making exciting news in the engineering world. According to some, it's a bridge that "can't be built."

The man picked to design the Messina straits bridge, to be the longest suspension bridge in the world, is Dr. David B. Steinman of New York City, who has built bridges on five continents and is probably the most famous bridge-builder in the world.

THE DIFFICULTIES Steinman faces are enormous. Besides whirlpools, violent storms, and raging currents, the water is deep—nearly 400 feet deep all the way across. That's a distance of about two miles. The main span of the bridge, as designed by Dr. Steinman, is nearly 20 per cent longer than San Francisco's famous Golden Gate bridge. Its main span would arch 5,000 feet, compared with a 4,200 foot main span for the Golden Gate bridge.

DR. STEINMAN'S design has been unanimously approved by a congress of the world's leading engineers convened at Messina straits, and the Italian cabinet is now in the process of approving it. The bridge will cost $60 million. Its total length will be 9,800 feet, a new world's record, displacing the Golden Gate bridge. It will carry both rail and highway traffic.

Dr. Steinman has designed important bridges on every continent on earth. His outstanding achievements include the remodeling of the Brooklyn bridge; building the Florianopolis bridge in Brazil, the largest bridge in South America and one which many engineers said could never be built; New England's largest bridge, the Mt. Hope bridge between Newport and Providence, R. I.; the Henry Hudson bridge; the Thousand Islands International bridge, and St. John's bridge at Portland, Ore.

Dr. Steinman also designed the famous "Skyride" at the Chicago World's Fair, which, he explains, was really just a novel type of suspension bridge. Dr. Steinman has been given 14 honorary degrees by leading universities throughout the world and has been presented with scores of medals and awards. He was the first president of the National Society of Professional Engineers and is now president of the New York Academy of Sciences.

WASHINGTON (AP)—Nothing Sen. McCarthy has said or done in these first nine months of the Eisenhower administration inflamed it so much as his recent criticism. But the Wisconsin Republican was using just a couple of new matches. It was an old one, relit, which made the administration jump the highest.

What was new in his nationwide broadcast a week ago can be stated briefly:

1. He declared himself an issue in the 1954 congressional elections. He told his audience to vote Republican if they approved of him, Democratic if they disapproved.
2. He contradicted President Eisenhower, who had said he hoped Communists in government wouldn't be an issue in those 1954 elections. McCarthy said it would be an issue.

But when in that same broadcast he undertook to tell the administration how to handle its foreign aid program, he wasn't saying anything new at all. That was his relit match.

Perhaps it was the way he said it—and the fact that he was talking over nationwide television and radio instead of in a statement from his office—which evoked retorts from Eisenhower and Secretary of State Dulles.

In a statement Sept. 23 McCarthy suggested the United States end all aid to Britain and America's other allies unless they stopped trading with Red China.

That was precisely what he said in his broadcast, and what he had been ammering away at for months.

In his broadcast he asked sarcastically if the Eisenhower administration was going to try to get the war prisoners freed by sending "perfumed notes" to the Communists.

He suggested this country force the Chinese to give up the prisoners by ending all trade with them by America's allies. He said the United States should shut off aid to the allies unless they ended trade with the Reds.

One of McCarthy's earliest collisions with the administration resulted from his announcement last March that members of his investigating staff negotiated with Greek ship owners to stop trade with the Communists in Asia.

In May McCarthy got into another one of his disputes with Dulles over allied ships which call at Red Chinese ports.

So what McCarthy said last week was what he has been saying, in one way or another, for months: stop the allies from trading with the Reds.

In May Dulles gave a reply which included a phrase that he was against urging "upon our friends and allies additional restrictions upon their trade with the Communists world even in terms of nonstrategic items."

This week, on Tuesday, Dulles said approximately the same thing: that this country does not have the right to dictate the allies' trade policies.

Although in his broadcast McCarthy was saying only what he had said before, this time Dulles considered it important enough to issue a prepared statement in rebuttal.

And Eisenhower at his news conference yesterday backed up Dulles with a prepared statement endorsing Dulles' reply to McCarthy.

Eisenhower's statement also took up the question of whether Reds-in-government would be an issue in 1954. Just as before, the President said he hoped it wouldn't. The issue, he said, should be whether his administration is doing a good job.

BIDDY—THE PERFECT SNOB!

Find Hens Jealous of "Social Standing"

Like so many bejeweled dowagers these hens parade about a poultry yard at Kansas State college unaware their snobbish tactics are being carefully studied by the alert collegian approaching from right.

By JERRY KLEIN
Central Press Correspondent

MANHATTAN, Kan.—An associate professor of zoology at Kansas State college has discovered that chickens are awful snobs.

Prof. A. M. Guhl says that within a few weeks after being hatched, chickens develop definite levels of society. Every flock acquires its domineering bosses and its obedient underlings.

Studying chickens at the college experimental station, Professor Guhl finds that this clearest social scale is largely a matter of pecking.

In every group, there is one chicken at the top who somehow has the right to peck all the others without getting pecked itself, as well as another chicken at the bottom who may peck nobody. Ranged in between is every other bird—who both pecks and is pecked—kept firmly in place by the one above it.

Hens begin to dominate other hens at the age of five weeks, the professor declares, and they develop definite "pecking orders" at nine weeks. Roosters peck each other, but seldom molest the hens.

A STRICT SOCIAL system seems to be the habit in other parts of the animal kingdom, too. Dr. Arthur A. Allen of Cornell university recently reported that cardinals, redpolls, waterfowl and other birds also follow definite pecking orders.

Cardinals have been known to fight their own window reflections in needless defense of some prerogative. To establish their superiority, ruffed grouse rumble like little freight trains, prairie chickens make a booming sound and mallard ducks "dogfight" in the air.

Social discipline keeps a fish in place.

The next time that you see this boy, give him another look

We mean your newspaperboy.

The reason for giving him another look is just we think you'll notice something different about him.

You see, he's in business for himself and it has taught him something he couldn't learn from books.

Better than most boys, he knows what dependability means. He understands what service really is. Punctuality has become important to him. Because he has something at stake, he has learned to meet and like people.

He's already accepting man-sized responsibilities—and is in training to accept still larger ones tomorrow.

Most boys like to be independent. And this one is. He earns his own spending money, buys some of his own clothes, is saving for his education and maybe even contributing something toward helping to run his home.

So look at him again and we think you'll see that a lot of this shows. Because with his parents, we share a great deal of pride in the job he's doing—and hope you do too.

THE CIRCLEVILLE HERALD

Every boy is entitled to the benefits of carrying a newspaper route. If he is willing to supply the ambition, we would like to supply the opportunity. If your son is interested, why not have him call us today regarding the availability of a route in your neighborhood.

Portsmouth, Massillon Stars Dominate All-Ohio Selection

COLUMBUS, Ohio (U.P.) — A fleet halfback from Portsmouth and a block-busting tackle from Massillon were selected today as the outstanding back and lineman in Ohio high school football circles.

LeRoy Carr of Portsmouth and Bruce Schramm dominated competition for the annual laurels just as their teams won out in the Associated Press poll to determine the select schoolboy squads.

Chuck Mather's mighty Massillon Tigers crushed 10 opponents and picked off their sixth straight state championship. Portsmouth's Trojans finished second in the final poll.

Carr, a convert end, scored 120 points on 20 touchdowns as the Trojans rolled up a 9-0 record. The 18-year-old senior stands 6-1 and weighs 185.

Past and shiny, Carr also completed 11 of 24 passes while gaining 1,363 yards on 97 rushing plays for an average of 14.1 yards per carry. He also is a basketball star, holding the school scoring record, and excels in track.

Mather, who has turned out some terrific line talent at the Massillon hotbed, calls Schramm "as good a lineman as I ever saw." Schramm, a 17-year-old senior, stands an even six feet and weighs 185. He hasn't decided yet where to attend college.

A poll of the state's sportswriters, sportscasters and coaches gave Carr a sizeable margin over his nearest competitor for the back-of-the-year honors, Upper Sandusky's Dave Kuenzli.

Kuenzli, a halfback snared the state scoring crown with 227 points on 32 touchdowns and 35 conversions. He passed for six more scores, gained 2,160 yards rushing and passing and plans to enroll next fall at Ohio State.

Massillon halfback John Traylor was third in the balloting. Playing both offense and defense, the 5-8, 160-pound halfback scored 108 points and drew praise from Coach Mather as "one of the best we've had in a long time."

Second-ranked among linemen was Bill Kerr, Steubenville tackle. Described by Coach Ray Hoyman as an "aggressive, rock 'em-sock 'em type" lineman, Kerr played four years of varsity ball and is seriously considering Ohio State as his college. Kerr is 19, 5-10 and tips the scales at 190.

Kerr barely edged out center Bill Van Buren of Lorain, who was rated third. A solid 200-pounder anyone else; he did not win the Senate or the House.

If, in 1954, he loses even his nominal majority, if the Democrats are able to produce an actual majority in both Houses, his last two years in office will be disastrous. It is not good for the country if the President is of one party and the Congress of another.

Sokolsky's These Days

The Democrats are not divided on the single point of winning in 1954. Their actual disagreements are deeper than those which exist among Republicans, but they are now united on the question of 1954. Their quarrels have been postponed until after that date. The Republicans cannot display a similar party discipline.

In the Eisenhower Cabinet, only two members understand politics. They are the Attorney General, Herbert Brownell, Jr., and the Postmaster General, Arthur E. Summerfield. If either of these men were given a free hand to bring the party together, he could do it. But the President seems not to be ready for that.

The President is a lovable personality. It could be said that he is the most lovable personality that has been in the White House in recent years. Nobody wants to be against him. Nobody questions his moral stature. But he proved in the 1952 that he cannot transfer the affection the people have for him to

Three-Time Daily Milking Hikes Output By 20 Per Cent

New Research Data Stresses Tough Schedule

Expert Finds Little Time To Sleep When Conducting His Tests

You can get 15 or 20 per cent more milk if you milk your cows three times a day.

But three-time milking is a grind if you milk at 8-hour intervals. There isn't time for a full quota of sleep between milkings.

New research at the Minnesota Experiment Station indicates that milkings don't have to be spaced evenly. Capper's Farmer reported recently on trials conducted by Dr. W. E. Peterson that show two-time milking can be respaced to 10- and 14-hour intervals without loss of milk production.

Moreover, the Wiad Institute in Sweden has shown that intervals might be as uneven as 8 and 16 hours with no loss of product, even with cows producing 14,000 pounds.

THE FARM magazine's editors ask Dr. Peterson what this would mean to a dairyman who would like to milk three times a day, but hesitates because milking every 8 hours doesn't give him a full night's sleep.

Petersen, a recognized authority on milking, says the milking intervals could just as well be 7 hours, 7 hours and 10 hours. Spacing the night and morning milkings 10 hours apart would enable the milk-er to get a full 8 hours of rest.

That will be good news to a lot of farmers, particularly those who start three-time milking in October and quit when Spring field work becomes pressing.

Here are some of the advantages of milking three times a day:

You get 15 to 20 per cent more milk. That extra milk might mean a lot to you if you are trying to establish a milk base as high as you can get it.

The increase in production gives you more milk to sell in Fall and Winter months when prices are high. Butterfat test goes up slightly, too.

COWS ARE more comfortable; udders stand up better, and there's less under injury.

The milk flow holds up better during lactation. And cows have a longer productive life. You want to keep the good ones around as long as you can.

So, milk three times a day—at 7 a. m., 2 p. m. and 9 p. m., for example. Your cows won't mind if you stagger the milking interval to suit your convenience, not theirs.

Tattle-Tale Speed Recorder Sought

DENVER (P)—Gov. Dan Thornton has been asked to have the Colorado Legislature consider next January a proposal that all automobile owners be required to install recording speedometers. Amey, Merriman Study Curfew; Parents Liable To Pay Fines

Mayor Ed Amey and Police Chief Elmer Merriman were preparing Thursday to check on legal strength of Circleville's curfew law as prelude to making it "more than just another law on the books."

Noting continued increase of the juvenile delinquency problem throughout the nation, and local incidents in the same category, Amey said officials agree there is immediate need for curfew enforcement here, "at least until we can feel certain we've got the delinquency situation under control in our community."

He and Merriman, however, said it would probably be necessary to check the city's present curfew regulations with City Solicitor George Gerhardt before any move can be made toward strict enforcement. The present ordinance, the mayor pointed out, requires that boys and girls under 17 be off the public streets and out of public places here between the hours of 10:30 p. m. and 5 a. m.

Exceptions, he said, are those children accompanied by older persons or those who are able to show they are carrying out some form of emergency errand or work. Amey also emphasized that the ordinance has provisions which can lead to fines and jail terms for parents or guardians who deliberately permit their children to violate the law.

"This is one of those cases in which we can get at the parents when they're at fault," he said.

PARENTS, GUARDIANS or any other persons having legal custody are let off easy the first time the children in their charge are picked up for violating the curfew. The children are warned and taken home.

On the second violation, however, those responsible for care of the children can be fined up to $10. And for the third violation, they can be fined up to $25 or given a
